Board And Staff Commended For High Standard At School

Principal J. B. Bastedo, the staff and public support are praised by A. J. Husband, high school inspector, in his annual report, based on inspection made April 26-28.

The report follows:
"I. Grading of Accommodations
"All the accommodations of the school have been graded as first-class. The following notes are added:

1. A special room has been equipped for teaching art.

2. The interior of the building has been painted.

"The excellent accommodations are in a state of good repair and are decorated with suitable colors. The members of the board are to be congratulated on the completion of this work.

"The value of the unconscious education that pupils receive from meeting in nicely decorated class-rooms, hung with beautiful pictures, cannot be overestimated.

"The former grading is continued for the current school year.

"Suitable desks or tables should be provided for the art room. I have discussed this matter with the teacher of art and also with the principal.

"Generous and very useful additions have been made to the library. The policy of making a reasonably adequate appropriation each year will yield good returns in an increased interest on the part of the pupils in worth-while literature. A school without a good library is much like a workshop without tools.

"Additions have also been made to the equipment for teaching science and several old typewriters were replaced by new ones at a cost to the board of $550.

"Supplies for the art room will be needed. The principal will furnish the board with a list of what is necessary."

"II. Character of the Teaching
"All the teaching that I observed gave evidence of careful preparation, and, in most cases, of considerable skill in using effective methods of instruction. For the most part it was good or excellent and none of it could be regarded as poor.

"The teachers who joined the staff in September had former successful experience. They are giving good service and appear to have won the confidence and esteem of their pupils.

"I discussed methods with individual teachers and also at a meeting of the staff.

"III. Character of the Pupils' Work
"The spelling and writing of the pupils in Grade IX are considerably above the average. The reading of the pupils in Form IB was, as a rule, quite good and showed that they are being carefully trained in this subject.

"Satisfactory progress has been made in bookkeeping. Neatness, accuracy and care in writing are being stressed.

"The new course in art is being followed and much interesting work has been done by individual pupils. With the present arrangement for seating and work, it is difficult for the teacher to achieve good results with the class.

"Some of the records of practical and experimental work in science are neatly made and well illustrated; others are not altogether satisfactory.

"IV. Special Reports
"The work of the pupils of Grade IX in writing and also their project work in geography and business practice merit special mention.

"Very good work is also being done by the classes in physical education. The apparatus and mat work of Form II boys was excellent.

"V. General Remarks
"A visit to the Newmarket high school impresses one with the interest the board and the community have taken in secondary education. The accommodations provided in the present well-appointed building are, apart from the teaching of shop-work and home economics, adequate for the needs of the pupils and are kept in a condition that should yield to them the maximum advantage from the point of view of unconscious education. By means of a rotary system and the use of the laboratories as classrooms, it would be possible to provide for three additional classes.

Schomberg Breaks Down Before Redmen's Onslaught

Newmarket Defeats Schomberg In One-Sided Tussle

By HERB CAIN

Under the master-minding of Joe "Baldy" Spillite, the local boys handed the Schomberg nine a decisive beating to the tune of 21-6 on the home grounds Thursday night last.

The batteries announced before the game were Niles and Burkholder for Newmarket, Walker and Sutton for Schomberg.

After Niles had set the visitors down in order the Redmen started off with a bang. Giles walked, Cunningham hit a triple, Peters doubled, and then Tunney hit a long home run to make the score 4-0 at the end of the first inning.

Schomberg went scoreless in their half of the second while Newmarket kept hitting the ball at a terrific clip and from two walks and two hits scored three more runs.

The visitors were still having trouble with Niles' fast one and went hitless in the third. Newmarket collected one more run in their half off hits by Tunney, Burkholder, Niles, and Giles.

The fourth was scoreless but Schomberg found their batting eye in the fifth and after two

Pastor Finds His Voice To Give Illustrated Lecture

Trinity United's voiceless pastor, Rev. R. R. McMath, gave a lecture on Monday evening. Mr. McMath's voice is gradually growing stronger, and on Monday he gave an illustrated lecture to a combined young people's group, from Trinity, Friends and Christian churches, with the aid of a loud-speaker system.

Mr. McMath's slides were of a tour of Ontario made by himself and Mrs. McMath and brought out many interesting but not

SAYS WOODEN HEADS ALLOW MEN TO RULE

Mayor Boyd Welcomes Institute Women To Newmarket

A challenge to women to take a more active part in public affairs and in the "doing over" which he declared the world required, was issued by Rev. G. Raymond Booth, pastor of the Maitland St. Friends church, Toronto, at the district annual meeting of North York Women's Institute, in the Friends church, Newmarket, on Friday.

"We ought to face the fact that the world needs a good deal of doing over, and the part that needs doing most is not more than a mile from us," was one of Mr. Booth's statements.

"I don't think there is any excuse for any woman in this room not being tied up with the problem of education in some way," he said.

"When I find a community where education is handled by men only, I wonder what kind of wooden-headed women they have."

"There is the problem of how to remain intellectually keen to the problems of life. The problem of adult education is how to make people realize that they don't know everything, that they must continue to learn throughout life.

"Most people don't live, they just exist."

"I think every woman ought to be actively interested in the commercial life of her community."

"I think that agricultural people ought to see that there is a great deal of truth, and a great big lie, in both the extreme socialist position and the extreme capitalist position."

"We should work for a co-operative society economically, in which all the fine things handed down to us are preserved. I think that you ought to be concerned not only with preparing food, but also with where it comes from, and how your products are marketed."

"I think people who are not interested in public affairs are immoral. The best people are the most immoral, the people who regard politics as unimportant."

"I want to see women become more politically keen and alert."

"There are people who would reform the world but sneer at the church. Give these people another ten or 15 cents an hour, or another nickel a bushel for potatoes, and they would be gone."

Says Overcharges $10,000 Since 1930

Statements Made at Council Corrected By Company

Correction of statements made at the town council meeting last week concerning the claim of the Office Specialty Manufacturing Co. for the refund of $4,500, overpaid to the town for electric power, was made by G. L. Manning, general manager of the Office Specialty Manufacturing Co.

To the statement that the company's bill had increased after the change of meters at the time of the company's last complaint, and that the company should have detected the mistake at that time, Mr. Manning replied that the town was confusing the time of settlement, October, 1932, with the time the meter was changed, October, 1932. In October, 1932, the company's bill was $260.10, and after the meter was changed the bill in November, 1932, was $141.30.

But the wrong multiplier was used with the new meter and, as the company has now discovered, the bill in November, 1932, should have been only $91.50, Mr. Manning said.

The company's claim, made in April, 1933, for overcharges as the result of the defective meter, was based on a comparison of the company's bills before and after the change of meters. This claim would be larger had it been based on bills calculated with the right multiplier.

More than that, Mr. Manning said that the company's claim in 1933 for a defective meter should have gone back to August, 1930, instead of just to January, 1932.

Mr. Manning stated that his company should have claimed $4,050 in 1933 instead of $1,100, if all the facts had been known. Actually, the company accepted a settlement of $766 at that time.

The company's present claim, however, for $4,506.75, is for the period from the change in the meter in October, 1932, to the present, and is based solely on the use of the wrong multiplier during that time.

Mr. Manning stated that the company has a further moral claim of $1,635, for the same period, based on the fact that the company has paid a minimum rate of one cent a kilowatt hour for power compared to one-quarter cent paid by other power users.

Chairs Presented To Mr. And Mrs. W. H. S. Cane By Trinity Friends

Members of Trinity United church paid tribute to the many years of service given by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. S. Cane to the church, the town and community, in the course of a social evening at the church last Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Cane, who are now living in Toronto, were accompanied by two of their sons, Alan and Phil. Mr. Cane is York county sheriff.

A program of entertainment was provided by Miss Mary Davis, solo; Robert Hacking, Aurora, solo; Lily Harris, piano solo; Miss Gwen Lambert, solo; Andrew Stouffer, violin solo.

Rev. R. R. McMath opened the meeting and then called upon George D. Wark to preside. Mr. Wark read an address of appreciation, and then Mr. and Mrs. Cane were called upon to accept two beautiful chesterfield chairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Cane replied shortly, and then Aubrey Davis, a friend of Mr. Cane from boyhood days, was called upon. After humbly telling how he and Mr. Cane as boys and young men had gone out together with horse-and-buggy and how he himself returned home to Kingston and to bed via blech limb and the verandah roof, Mr. Davis said that Mr. Cane had

Sunday Must Be More Than "Wholesome," Says Pastor

Sabbath Not For Work Or Pleasure, Writes Dr. D. McIntyre

Editor, The Era: I read your interview with the Montreal preacher about the Sabbath Day, last week. If you are looking for reliable information, that would be the approval of your understanding and the affections of your heart, why not go to the seat of authority?

The Bible is the only rule of faith and conduct. You will find the commandment on this subject in the 20th chapter of Exodus and eighth verse. It says definitely that we have to keep the day "holy." And holy according to the context does not mean "wholesome," but "separate." Man is to labor six days, but the Sabbath is to be kept separate. It is God's day. "But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God, in it thou shalt not do any work."

The commandment forbids man doing any secular work but permits him to do God's work of necessity or mercy. God has set aside the day as his, why should we want to make it ours? The first rule that is laid down in the Bible for the Christian is obedience.

Disobedience to this commandment was punished by death. In Exodus 31:15 we read: "Six days may work be done; but in the seventh is the Sabbath of rest, holy to the Lord; whoever doeth any work in the Sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death." According to Numbers 15:32 the man that the children of Israel found gathering sticks in the wilderness was put to death.

This fourth commandment is explained by Isaiah as against our own pleasure on the Sabbath. He says, "not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words; then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth." Isaiah 58:13.

In conclusion let me say that ethics deals with right and wrong. It has no place for the man of expedience or the expert compromiser who can preach a sermon at 11 and play baseball at 3. I feel like Dr. Parker of the City Temple, London, when he said, "I do not want to deprive any soul of its pleasures, but when those pleasures are of a kind that shut out all that is most spiritual, most heavenly, I must lay my hands upon them at least in an arresting attitude."

Put Government Tags On Simcoe Cows, Remanded

Didn't Try To Obtain Any Compensation, William Jordan Says

Taking tags from the ears of two cows he bought from accredited herds, William Jordan, King township, admitted that he placed these tags on the ears of two cows he had purchased from Simcoe county, an unregistered area, in police court on Tuesday. He was remanded one week for sentence.

Mr. Jordan pleaded guilty to charges of two infringements of the Animal Contagious Diseases Act, and a charge of entering cattle into a quarantined area, and not guilty to a charge of trying to obtain compensation for his cows by fraud but was convicted on all four charges.

Peter Mulrhead, sixth concession, King, and Edward Haines, Kettleby, each testified that they had sold one cow to Mr. Jordan from their accredited herds.

Dr. H. McLeod, veterinary inspector, testified that he had tested the herd and two cows reacted.

Dr. W. W. Moynihan, health of animal branch of the department of agriculture, said that he investigated and found the tags had been tampered with.

Mr. Jordan said that he wasn't shipping milk, and that he needed the milk from these two cows to veal his calves. He said he hadn't made a claim for compensation.

New Deal Scheme To Clean Up Boulevards Won't Cost A Penny

Following up the announcement that the United States government will each, to leave at a cost of $5 each, to let leavers each do $300 worth of dam building, as part of a conservation project, a prominent citizen visited The Era office this week with a meritorious proposal.

"The boulevards in this here town are disgraceful," he said. "I mean the uncultivated grass between private property and the sidewalks, and between the sidewalks and the streets."

"Now I know it ain't nobody's fault. It is unreasonable to expect any man to tidy up the public domain, even if it would make his own property more attractive when he can be setting on his own porch, watching the cars go by. For after all, I figure other people are going to enjoy the improved appearance of his property just as much if not more than, he will himself."

"Now my idea is this. I don't claim no credit for it. I just took

New Studies Course Said To Be Success

Home and School Clubs Needed, States Speaker

Higher salaries in order to hold and attract a better class of teachers in public schools, was urged by V. K. Greer, chief inspector of public and separate schools, at a public meeting for York inspectorate No. 1 of public schools, at Pickering College on Saturday afternoon.

Evidencing the interest in the new course of study, principal subject of discussion, 250 persons crowded the auditorium.

Inspector R. H. Roberts was in the chair. The speakers were Mr. Greer and Mrs. E. E. Reece, provincial president, Home and School Federation of Ontario.

"Many schools lose grants that could have been paid them, because they didn't earn them," said Mr. Greer.

"A large sum of money that had been set aside for grants is turned back to the province every year," said Mr. Greer. "By increasing teachers' salaries, schools could earn grants that are being turned back to the province."

Mr. Greer explained the new scale of increased grants. Grants to urban centres, including towns, are made on the basis of average attendance and teachers' salaries. Grants to rural schools are based on average attendance, teachers' salaries and purchase of equipment.

There has been a substantial increase in grants. The minimum grant per pupil to rural schools of $1 per pupil, for instance, has been increased to $1.50. In poor rural school sections, with low assessments, it is possible to earn a grant of as high as 77 per cent of the teachers' salaries, in addition to grants for average attendance and maintenance.

"The object of the new course of study is not so much to impart factual knowledge, as to increase the pupil's ability to do for himself," said Mr. Greer. "The purpose is to develop the Praise of the teachers in his inspectorate, and credit for the way they have worked out the new course of study, was given by Inspector R. H. Roberts.

MAYOR WOULD REBUILD, RAISE DOMESTIC RATES

The following letter to electric light users in Newmarket, is written by Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd.

"The proper time to investigate is before you invest. The electric light situation is in some way of a tangled right now. This is the time for us to get all possible information and discuss the matter freely before we place any money on the line.

"Having been chairman of the electric light committee in the years 1913 and 1914 and having studied the question closely during the past four years while I have been mayor, I have learned a lot about it and wish to pass the following information along to the citizens.

"Facts are hard things to get over. It is a fact that we have been selling current at one-half cent per K.W.H., which is less than the cost of the current and the upkeep of the system.

"It is a fact that we have during the last 25 years provided a sinking fund for maintenance and extensions on the system. The result has been that the distributing system has become run pupil's initiative and interests, and to produce a better type of citizen."

Mrs. Reece urged the formation of home and school clubs.

"To home education, given often by untrained parents, is added school education, given by trained teachers," said Mrs. Reece. "So that the home may work intelligently with the school, home and school associations provide an opportunity for all parents by means of lectures, study groups, and conferences with trained leaders and teachers to become co-operative, well informed allies of the school."

Mrs. Reece referred to the Home and School Association creed that "a home and school association should be concerned with all problems that relate to the welfare of the child in the home, school and community."

Mrs. Reece told of a questionnaire which the federation of home and school associations had sent out to its members for discussion and reply, and the verdict had been almost unanimously that the new course of studies was fostering initiative, reading, new interests and a better attitude toward school on the part of the pupils.

THURSDAY, JUNE 16TH, 1938

MAIN ST. PROBLEMS

There is no need to be hopeless about Newmarket's Main St. There is a solution to our difficulties. The town council is already well on the way to a solution of that problem by moderating the half-hour parking by-law, which proved impractical, to hour parking. If the police commission and the town constables use discretion in enforcement of the by-law, there will be no harm done, no feelings hurt, and the street will be made much more useful to the public. There should be no occasion for any prosecutions under the by-law. The police should treat people parking on Main St. just as they would if they were merchants themselves and those people were their customers.

No Fines Needed

The police should not interfere with bona fide shoppers, even if they park on Main St. two or three hours, beyond asking them if they would mind moving their cars to the conveniently-located market square. In the past, we are told, the business people themselves have taken a good deal of the parking space. We are sure that they too will co-operate if they are requested to keep their cars off Main St. as much as possible. Tactful enforcement of the by-law should bring an increase in business to Main St.

What Orillia Has Done

That is a start on the problem. A further step will be possible with the removal of light poles from the street. It is proposed to replace these poles with standards. Before the town takes any action in this direction, we believe that representatives of the town should visit Orillia and see what Orillia is doing. The argument which won out there, persistently presented by Mr. C. H. Hale of the Packet and Times, who is also, we believe, a member of the town's water and light commission, was: Why take down one set of poles to put up another? The result is that Orillia is attaching all its business section lights to buildings, and the effect is said to be a wonderfully more attractive business street. The point we set out to make, however, is that removal of light poles, if not replaced by standards, should make possible some widening of the street. The council has had this thought for some time.

Planning the Future

More important still is provision of a real solution for the future. The town could pass a by-law, before another new building or new front goes up, permitting no new building, or no new front, to be erected in front of a new wide street line. It is legally possible to pass such a by-law, although statutory authority might be required. It is nothing new. Most growing cities have to take similar action, and Newmarket, although not a city, is certainly a growing town. Let us give our children, and the citizens of 25 years hence, a wide Main St. and unscrapped car fenders.

WELL MERITED HONOR

The Canadian Statesman, published in Bowmanville, has been awarded the Pearce trophy for the best editorial page of any English-language weekly in Ontario or Quebec. The Era frequently quotes from the Statesman, and evidently with good reason. The Statesman is published in a town the same size as Newmarket, but is a larger newspaper, that is, it is eight columns like The Era, but it is usually ten pages and frequently 12. There is only one newspaper in Bowmanville.

A SCHOOL NURSE FOR KING

(Contributed by Leonard Harman, King Township)

Last week our local school board started a movement for a school nurse in the township. The whole thing grew very naturally out of attempts to deal with the needs of two children in the section, one of whom has poor sight and the other of whom has poor hearing.

The three trustees, the secretary, and the teacher were unanimous in their decision that something must be done to deal with these pressing cases. But what of other children who might be in the earlier stages of various ailments? There are many families in the township, who, largely because of very low incomes, are quite unable to secure frequent inspection and adequate health treatment. Besides, these are the cases where a child is developing some weakness that goes unrecognized by his parents who see him every day. He grows up so fast that they hardly notice his development. But the growth of some unnoticed defect may be quite as rapid as the growth of stature. The expert trained concerning the human body and making a thorough and impartial examination should spot the trouble and suggest or even provide means of checking it in its early stages.

If city children could have social health services, why could not country children? Are they any less precious? If we can have a specialist in music spreading his time over a township, why not a specialist in health? It is improbable that the singing will be of a high order if the eye is dim, the ear is dull, and the throat is swollen. So reasoned our local board.

These five people did not merely confine themselves to wishing for a school nurse in the township. They began to seek the way to attain this service. None of them professed knowledge of this type of organization; it appeared simple on the surface. So the trustees instructed the secretary to secure all possible information on the subject. They want to know what has been done elsewhere in this line. They want some indication of probable cost. When they understand the matter a little more clearly they want action.

"We have here," writes David Grayson of a similar school meeting, "the greatest institution in this round world: the institution of free self-government. Great in its simplicity, great in its unselfishness."

There is no evidence that any of the five people at this little school meeting would reap gain for themselves by the appointment of a school nurse. None of them have any near relatives whom they would like to put on the public pay-roll through the plan. Three of the five have no children of their own who would benefit by the service. All would need to contribute something through increased taxation. But the point is that a need exists and it must be satisfied.

"That's real politics," continues Grayson, "the voluntary surrender of some private good for the upbuilding of some community good."

ABERNATH'S DEFEAT

Everyone seems pleased about the result of the Saskatchewan election, that is, everyone in Ontario with the exception of a few social creditors. Not holding any Saskatchewan farm mortgages, and not knowing definitely that any of our life insurance companies held any Saskatchewan mortgages, we were not greatly worried about the result. A couple of points about the election strike us as interesting. One is the re-wiping out of one of the older parties. Saskatchewan voted conservative (with a small "C") and it returned a Liberal government (with a big "L"). Westerners fail to see any difference between Liberals and Conservatives. They wanted sane, sensible, stable government and they voted for it. It is only a matter of time until Liberals and Conservatives merge into one party throughout the entire dominion.

Social Credit vs. C. C. F.

Another interesting point was the showing made by the C. C. F., which was supposedly wiped out and finally interred in the last dominion election. The C. C. F. will be in the new house, as it was in the last house, the official opposition. That may foreshadow the future in Canada as a whole. Liberal and Conservative parties may gradually become one, because they have nothing different to offer, and the C. C. F. or some similar party with an alternative program is necessary to the working of our parliamentary system. It is strange that social credit, which was heralded as a way of making capitalism work, should be regarded by business men as a deadly enemy and that the C. C. F., which doesn't hope to make capitalism work, is regarded as comparatively respectable and harmless.

POLITICAL PATRONAGE

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett has been discussing political corruption from time to time during the present session of parliament. He says that both parties have used political patronage to an undesirable extent, but the other day he was throwing some charges against the government. Prime Minister King was apparently well armed, and waiting, for he hurled back at Mr. Bennett a charge that Mr. Bennett, while in office, had used patronage in what Mr. King termed a very scandalous way. Mr. Bennett apparently indulged in a little too much bear-baiting, but the truth is that both parties use political patronage, as it is natural that they should, to try to win elections. We do not mean to defend it, but so long as our Canadian politics are a battle between the ins and the outs, with no fundamental issues dividing the two major parties, it is inevitable that the contending parties are going to promise prizes to those who support them.

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville
Personal Responsibility

The word "we," in reference to oneself, used to be the exclusive prerogative of royalty and editors. Now we all use it when we do not wish to feel or let others feel that we should assume individual responsibility for some particular thing.

This thought of shifting our responsibilities — was brought home to me, very pointedly, last Sunday, as I listened to a memorable sermon by a noted preacher.

He said that so many of the generation which know nothing of the Great War, are belittling the real heroism and self-sacrifice of the boys who gave up "their tomorrow for our today."

He was 19 years of age, a student at a university in 1914, and he said that under all the lure of adventure, the age-old desire for thrills, there lay the stern determination of his enlisting fellow students to uphold democracy. They were eager fight, that might might not assume the guise of right.

We, who lived through those four incredible years, know what sacrifices were made by many who went.

They ALL knew they might never return; to those who loved family and home, it was a wrench to do what they considered right; a decision which no one in these succeeding years, has been called on to make, in our own land.

There were some who went from less worthy motives — because they wanted a change — they got it, forsooth! — because they were out of work, because they wanted to see other countries, but of the great army of young and not so young men who went, nearly all had — perhaps deeply hidden — but none the less strongly felt — idealism, which was threatened by the tenets of the enemy creed.

The minister went on to say that the idealism of the men who fought to save democracy has been subjected to so many shocks, that it is becoming harder day by day to know what path they can follow and still be true to their convictions.

When we look at the holocaust of death and destruction in China, the frightful death toll in Spain, and the pathetic exodus of rich and poor, learned and ignorant, scholar and peasant, from Austria, our blood boils and we feel a "hands off policy," to be an insult to common decency, let alone Christian principles.

And the speaker then turned to this great new land of ours — North America, and he said we were trying to pluck the mote out of our brother's eye, without first seeing if our own vision was clear.

What were we doing to set our own house in order. In 1914-18, men fought for the maintenance of free speech, free religion, the right to live their own lives. After 20 years all these things are either lost or threatened in many lands; but here at home, what have we?

An army of men, women and children, who have free speech — certainly — but free speech is poor comfort, when one's stomach is insufficiently filled, when little children face the prospect of growing up with no better prospect than to go on relief as their parents did, when young men and women equipped with education for a real place in the world, find that all the real places are occupied, and there is no future for them.

Where is our vaunted freedom of action? A man cannot have any freedom who is tied hand and foot by poverty. This speaker said as far as he could see, the solution of the whole vexed problem of the world muddle lay primarily with the individual, then the family, the communities, whether rural or urban, and lastly the countries.

And indeed it seems that a country where murder, kidnapping, swindling and blackmail flourish, can ill afford to throw stones, until their own social structure rests on a firmer basis. Our death toll on this continent from automobiles, from air crashes, from various violent causes, would not disgrace a war torn country and the strange thing is that, although we decry war as inhuman, we accept this sacrifice of human life as part of the price we pay for living in this age.

I wonder if each of us took stock of our own lives, if we weeded out our little dislikes and antagonisms, and cultivated the best that is in each one of us, if in time, the influence wouldn't spread to those near us; and just as a stone thrown into the water causes widening circles, so would a real personality freed from pettiness and filled with a comsuming desire to help touch every life with which it came in contact, leave some of its own urge toward all that is best in life.

Many evil things are contagious, but so are many good things, and if each individual would say "I" instead of "we" would leave no stone unturned, to serve my day and generation, it would be contagious; surely as contagious as the war fever which is sweeping and devastating so many lands. If war fever is contagious, why can't the peace fever be equally so? In the end it all simmers down to each one of us saying "I can LIVE peace, and one, multiplied by a country of ones, would soon spread to other countries.

Peace begins in the home!

Rev. George A. Little, editor of Sunday-school publications for the United Church of Canada, at the Bay of Quinte conference of the United Church at Napanee last week, said that he believed that Premier Hepburn, who has "the courage to change his policy when it is expedient," soon may change his policy on operation of beverage rooms.

Newspapers are coming into a new use in the Grimsby Beach district, being used to cover long rows of cherry trees to scare birds away from the rapidly ripening fruit.

President S. J. Hungerford of the Canadian National Railways proposed compulsory co-operation, enforced by an arbitral tribunal as a remedy for Canada's railway ills, in Ottawa on Tuesday.

Cadet H. G. Campbell of the Royal Military College was found dying in his room on Monday during graduation exercises. It is stated that he received an anonymous letter about a month ago reproaching him for the death of Cadet R. D. Smith of Toronto, on May 2, following a scuffle between the two cadets.

A NONCONFORMIST ORDER OF SERVICE

By Rev. R. R. McMath

ARTICLE 2

I think it well in the psychology of the service, to complete or rather follow the approach with an organ meditation. This allows late-comers to enter and gives each one a chance to settle down before following into the second part of the service which is:

2. Instruction or Edification. This second part will include an anthem by the choir. You see the choir does not sing to entertain. It ministers. If it does not minister it should be disbanded. It is not to see nor to be seen. It has a definite place in the leadership and in the rendering of the anthem or some other musical item. Their rendering should mean soul edification. The second step also includes a responsive reading, usually from the Old Testament (a Psalm), and a New Testament lesson. I suppose for a strictly Christian service the New Testament lesson should be a story from the life of Christ. Many churches these days include in this second part a children's story.

All these acts of worship may be interspersed with prayer. Not the long prayer as many people call it. There should be no such act of worship as a long prayer. Prayer should be very definite, even in a service of worship. A short prayer of thanksgiving. A brief prayer of intercession. Pray for the particular person, state or thing. Why should the church in every service not remember its sick ones by name? They should be prayed for personally and nothing else prayed for in the same brief prayer. Even silent prayer is an act that should be cultivated.

All this period of instruction should end with the sermon. It should be the culmination of the Ascription or in a very brief theme running through this entire period, and it may well end in a prayer. The church should be a happy one where all these exercises are not carried out by the priest or minister nor are they all exercised from the same place which is generally called a pulpit. The reading of the scripture should not only be a definite act, but should be read from a lectern. This engages the mind of the worshipper and makes the reading stand out, not as a preliminary to something else, but rather a specific act. So little bible reading is done at home these days that the church must give that act a very prominent place. The pulpit is for the preaching of the gospel—the interpreting of it and should not be used for anything else. Too often it is the stand where we have auctioned off to us, the adjuncts. That is teas, concerts, etc., etc. If the above exercises are correctly arranged and reverently carried through, the mind will easily follow from approach through instruction to consecration.

HE WAS ALWAYS

Miserable Time

Suffering from three complaints — disordered kidneys, sciatica, and rheumatism, how could this man be anything else but always tired and ill? This is what he writes:—

"Up to a month or so ago, I had suffered continually from kidney disorder, sciatica, rheumatism, and generally felt off color. I was constantly tired, and under medical supervision. I tried many remedies, but without effect until I gave Kruschen Salts a trial. In four weeks, Kruschen has brought about a complete transformation. I have a healthy appetite and once more feel that it is good to be alive."—S. V. N.

The kidneys are the filters of the human machine. If they become sluggish, impurities find their way into the blood-stream, and the seed of half-a-dozen common ailments is sown.

The scientific combination of salts in Kruschen quickly coaxes the kidneys back to healthy, normal action. Soon your ailments are relieved and life becomes a joy again.

Liquor At Parties Brings
Fines For Five In CourtConstables Find Liquor At Weiner Roast, Barn
Dance

Three charges of having illegal possession of liquor, laid against James Forhan, Cecil Jarvis, and Lionel McKenzie, all of Newmarket, were changed to consuming, on the consent of Constable R. Watt, who laid the charges.

Each of the men were fined $10 with costs of $3, or 15 days. Constable Watt testified he found the three men drinking at a weiner roast.

Two similar charges laid against Burton Collins, Toronto, and Kenneth Carter, were also changed to consuming on the consent of Constable A. Fleury, who laid the charges. Each was fined $10 with costs of $3, or ten days.

Constable Fleury testified he found the two men in a car outside a barn dance. In the car were six pints of stout, and also a case containing four empties and a part bottle.

Collins admitted owning the liquor and said he had consumed the four bottles in Toronto and was taking the stout back home.

A charge of theft of a car, laid against Mrs. T. Cole was remanded one week to determine whether the case was one for the civil court. Jack Crozier, Sutton, was counsel for Mrs. Cole.

The owner of the car, Reginald Watmore, testified he bought the car two years ago. On Monday, June 6, he ran out of gas and left the car at Cole's.

When he came back on Thursday the car was locked in a garage and Mrs. Cole refused to give it back to him, he claimed.

Watmore stated he had stayed three years with Coles and they were on the best of terms. He said he didn't owe Mrs. Cole anything but admitted she had a lien note against him.

"My client has a lien note of $88.50 against Watmore and she has the right to seize as soon as claimed Mr. Crozier.

Convicted on a charge of reckless driving, Frank Kay, Sutton, was fined $10 with costs, or ten days.

"I was driving my wagon east on the Salter Line, which is paved," testified Wm. Beechner, Pefferlaw. "Kay's car was also going east and it crashed into the back of my wagon."

"There was plenty of room for the car to pass. It was daylight at the time but it was raining and the pavement was slippery. When the car struck the wagon, I was knocked unconscious and received injuries. The road is level at that place."

"I have been driving for 20 years," stated Mr. Kay. "The pavement was wet and I didn't see the wagon till I got right up to it."

A character witness, Mr. Sibbald, proprietor of Sutton Dairy, stated the accused didn't drink or smoke and that he was an excellent driver.

Adeline Leventer, speeding, $11 and costs. A. J. McGarrel, speeding, $6 and costs. Robert Jamieson, Toronto, speeding, $8 and costs.

Rudolph Dunbar, speeding, $8 and costs, or eight days. E. J. Morrison, Toronto, speeding, $10 and costs. Archie Watson, Stainer, speeding, $8 and costs.

Edgar Stone, Aurora, speeding, $8 and costs, or six days. A. & P. Co., Toronto, speeding, $6 and costs.

Arthur Hogg, bad brakes, remanded for sentence on payment of costs, or two days.

Henry H. McCutchen, charged with having control of a car while intoxicated, and reckless driving, was remanded one week. Bail set at $500. Jack H. Carty, similarly charged, remanded to July 5. Bail set at $500.

George West, charged with permitting drunkenness and having illegal liquor, remanded one week.

George Chanler, charged with not paying wages, $19.55 and costs. Harold Boyd, reckless driving, $10 and costs, or ten days.

William Morden, York township, assaulting his wife, ten days.

George Jarvis, Holland Landing, and Constable Ronald Watt gave evidence.

Leo Flannigan, Toronto, possessing burglary tools and theft, suspended sentence for six months.

John Goldman, Toronto, reckless driving, $10 and costs or ten days.

Archie Foster, Newmarket, theft, 60 days, reckless driving, ten days. Constable James Sloos said that after chasing Foster through town he found in Foster's car a battery stolen from E. Woolven.

R. Hendry, merchant at Orchard Beach, slot-machine, $20 and costs or 15 days. The charge was laid by Constable W. Martindale.

John Corbett, Toronto, and George Cronsberry, Toronto, causing a disturbance, $20 and costs or 20 days each. Evidence was given that the two men were fighting on a dance floor at Jackson's Point.

Horse Show's Quality Sets All-Time Record

Judges Acclaim Many Fine Horses Shown In Town Park

ATTENDANCE IS GOOD

"The best horse show we've ever had," was the description given to last Saturday's big event by A. M. Kirkwood, secretary of the Aurora Agricultural Society. The judges had told him, he said, the show ranked as the best of its kind, outside Toronto. The spectators came in for special praise. A crowd estimated at over 3,000 thronged the grounds and old and young alike were thrilled by the fine animals exhibited. Opening of the show was prefaced by a march down Yonge St. by Aurora's junior band, looking exceptionally smart in their new uniforms. Inside the grounds, shooting galleries, merry-go-rounds, and numerous concessions were greatly enjoyed. The horse show received a fair break from the weather man, and a local shower in the morning turned out to be extremely local and had no effect on the truckloads of horses that poured into the town from all directions.

Detailed results were as follows:

Mendelssohn Choir's Visit To Help Provide Band Stand

Famed Choir's Performance Expected To Bring Many Visitors.

Fear that a sudden shower or windy day might change the plans of the many in the district who planned to attend Aurora's second big musical event of the year, has changed the visit of the Mendelssohn choir from an outside to an inside performance.

The 300-voice choir, whose visit is scheduled for June 25, will therefore be held in the Aurora arena instead of the town park. It is believed, too, that the inside performance will enable many to hear the famous choir to better advantage.

Members of the Rising Sun Lodge will attend the service at the United church on Sunday evening.

The choir is giving a performance in the huge open-air theatre at Niagara Falls this coming weekend, to be followed by their visit here on Saturday evening of next week.

Proceeds of the choir's performance, less expenses will be given toward the building of a bandstand in the town park. The bandstand, it is felt, will do much toward making the park more of a community centre.

Team Blows Up Following Decision In Fifth Inning

After four innings of sparkling ball against Richmond Hill in the town park on Wednesday evening, the home-townners had a nice edge of 3-0.

Then a decision in the fifth inning, on a put-out on a forced play threw the Aurorans off stride and out of the ball game. The play cost Aurora four runs. This was followed by a three-run Richmond Hill hitting spree in the seventh and a single tally in the eighth, giving Richmond Hill an 11-3 walk-over.

The team goes to Schomberg on Thursday of this week and hopes to get back into scoring shape for their "revenge" game with Richmond Hill, in the Aurora park on Tuesday.

This beach is on the lake front of the farm that has been in the family of the late Isaac Marritt for three-quarters of a century.

The picnic was attended by over 100 of the descendants and there were many more that were unable to be present.

The weather was ideal and as usual the reunion was most thoroughly enjoyed by both old and young.

Ball Game Features Tie Score, Argument

Fielding Fumbles Cost Aurorans Softball Victory

SEVEN OR NINE INNINGS?

When three over-anxious Aurora fielders all tried for an easy pop fly over second base, when Newmarket had the bases loaded in the sixth inning at Aurora on Tuesday night, they all failed to nab the ball and three runners came in standing up.

The fumble enabled Newmarket to come from behind and mark up a 7-5 lead at the end of the sixth, and after a scoreless seventh, Newmarket wanted to call it a game, as the lights had gone on.

For fans who like lots of argument mixed up with their softball, it was a good game. These two teams have mixed it up three times. A seven-inning tie in Newmarket was followed by a nine-inning, one-run win for Newmarket in the town park, followed by the tie game on Tuesday. Even a reporter could tell the teams were closely matched.

Giles led off in the first inning for Newmarket and got to first on a bunt, sped round second and third to come home, when the Aurorans tried for an out at first instead of home plate. "Ninny" Heaney walked for Aurora and came home on hits by Shore and Yakes.

Newmarket tallied twice in the second when Tunney slid home safely on a close call. Before the dust had settled and while Mike Shatka was still arguing the decision, Peters used his head and came in for the visitors' third run. Aurora went scoreless in the last half of the second and neither team counted in the third.

A fourth inning rally by Newmarket was nipped in the bud by Marvin Hunter, Aurora's ace shortstop, after Joe Tunney had got to second on a fumble and Peters had got to first. Burkholder's hit was nabbed by Hunter for a smart double play and Hilton went out with a hit to Hunter.

Aurora looked to be ready for a scoring spree of its own in the second half of the inning.

POSTPONE PENETANG TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Members of the Aurora tennis club who were to compete in a group tournament match in Penetang on Wednesday, will make the trip on Sunday, instead.

Pecette and Shakta fanned. Hunter rounded the bases to tally, followed by Helmke, White and "Ninny" Heaney and a hit by Shore. Newmarket's basemen were awake, however, and none scored, though a long hit would have won the game.

Aurora made good in the fifth, after retiring the visitors quickly. Mike Shatka proved the hero, knocking out a three-base hit with Ted Heaney and Pecette coming in safely. Mike came home himself to make it 5-3 for Aurora, though Hunter and Helmke went out on flies.

Newmarket reversed the situation when three Aurorans who seldom make any mistakes at all, joined to pull the blunder of the game. Cunningham walked and came home on Tunney's two-bagger. Then Tunney, Hilton and Niles ambled in while three Aurorans tried to do one man's work in catching a hit from Giles.

Next inning was scoreless and was followed by the old "seven-or-nine-inning" argument, which was certainly not helped by the uncertain attitude of the umpire behind the plate.

Another inning was decided upon. Newmarket went out with four batters. Helmke led off for Aurora and tucked in a home-run. White fanned, "Ninny" walked to first and went out at second. Shore hit to first, and Yakes walked and Ted Heaney hit to fill the bases. Pinch-hitter Bone fooled Webster, who had come to the mound in place of Niles and walked, forcing in the tying run. Mike hit to first but a man was forced out to end the game.

The game featured Niles and Webster, pitching for Newmarket, and the hurling of "Butch" Pecette and Shore for Aurora. Poor fielding by the usually "on-their-toes" Aurora squad robbed the home team of a win.

The umpiring was done by "Hap" Neal and Bob Wilson.

MANY owners say a new G.E. Refrigerator saves enough money month by month to pay its own cost. They calculate it saves up to 20% on perishable food bills. Figure out what that would mean to you. By keeping food fresh a G.E. Refrigerator enables you to buy in quantities at week-end bargain prices. It prevents waste by preserving "left-overs". It uses so little current and the upkeep cost is almost nothing. Don't think you're being economical by doing without a G.E. Refrigerator. It's much more thrifty to have one.

THE OSTREKOFF JEWELS

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

A GREAT NOVEL OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

SYNOPSIS

Wilfred Haven, attache of the American Embassy in Petrograd, leaves the Russian capital during the 1917 upheaval, carrying a fortune in jewels. The jewels have been entrusted to him for delivery in London to Princess Elisaveta Ostrekoff as her inheritance from Prince and Princess Ostrekoff, who are under sentence of death.

About to leave Petrograd, Haven rescues Anna Kastellane from a fate worse than death at the hands of a Bolshevik mob. They reach Warsaw, narrowly escaping death at the hands of Russian agents. There they outwit Polish officials, who endeavor to obtain possession of the jewels. Anna manages to engage a plane and they find themselves in the hands of two Polish army officers, who plan to drop them at widely separated places after obtaining the jewels. Haven obtains all the jewels on the plane and orders it landed in Odessa.

A Valuable Friendship

Serge Zakoff, newly appointed governor of Odessa, sat before his desk in the large Council room, where, for 12 hours a day, he strove to establish order out of chaos, and looked at the long list presented him by his secretary, a young Jewish woman, dressed with an affection of military style in a blue tunic and loose trousers tucked into high boots.

"Do you mean, Lydia Andre-kovitch," he demanded, "that all these people are here and that they expect personal audiences?"

"All these and one other," the girl replied. "She would not tell me her name, but she wrote it on a card and placed it in this envelope."

Serge Zakoff slit open the envelope with a thin knife that lay before him on the table. He drew out the card and looked at it. His eyes grew wide with astonishment, some inaudible ejaculation escaped him. He hesitated, for a moment, then he tore the card into small pieces and, placing them in an ash tray, laid the cigarette which he had been smoking on the top of them.

"I will decide what can be done about seeing the others in a few minutes," he announced. "Those having business connected with ships waiting in the harbor must have preference. First of all, though, bring this young woman into my private room."

The girl departed without a word, but with the air of one ill pleased with her mission. Zakoff, picking up some papers, crossed the bare floor of the room and disappeared into an inner bureau. He was standing there, looking out upon the harbor through a high, uncurtained window, when his secretary returned.

"It is the young woman, Governor Serge Zakoff," she announced.

The governor swung around, looked at Anna steadfastly for a moment, and pointed to a chair. He himself moved to the place on the other side of his desk.

"So it is indeed you, my fellow student," he observed, as soon as Lydia Andrekovitch had left the room. "I heard of you last in Petrograd. How long have you been in Odessa?"

"A matter of 35 minutes," she told him, smiling, "and I have heard a good deal already of Serge Zakoff, the governor."

He sighed. His was a thin, thoughtful face, with a mass of brown hair and brown eyes marred by too light eyebrows. He wore a severe, well-fitting uniform, a red sash tied round his tunic.

"I am beginning to discover," he confided, "that these places on the outskirts of our new dominion present peculiar difficulties. To govern here is almost as impossible as to submit to govern-ment. What can I do for my friend and comrade?"

"What I shall tell you in these few words," she declared, "will sound like the story of a mad woman, but you who know me know that I speak the truth."

with a Polish army and join the White forces."

"Yes," Zakoff agreed softly. "I know Grotzowill, and I can guess at the nature of that trouble."

"Between us," she went on, "the American and I hired a plane in which we were to be taken to some friendly or neutral country. A plot was laid for us which would have succeeded but for the courage of my companion. He was to have been stripped of all his possessions and either thrown out of the plane or left to die of starvation in the marshes over which we passed. I was to be returned to General Grotzowill at a shooting lodge which he keeps for the entertainment of his lady friends near the frontier. A man who was a stranger to me, Patinsky, of the Polish Cavalry and a flying man, Esterhazy, whom we were paying for the plane, acted as our escorts. My companion, who, though occasionally rather stupid, is a very brave man, outwitted and disarmed them, but unfortunately spared their lives. We landed here on the flying ground this morning. They got into one taxi and I imagine you will find them by this time in your waiting room. I got into another and persuaded your secretary to take my card in to you."

"You are here, Comrade Anna," the governor said, "and you are welcome, but proceed quickly, for I can hear that outside they are becoming impatient. How can I help you? First of all tell me this—is the American you speak of your lover?"

"He is not," she replied, a spot of color showing in her cheeks. "He behaves as though he had been brought up in the back woods and he knows no more about women than I do about crocodiles. He believes incredible things about me and he apparently dislikes me more than any one else on earth."

"Proceed then," Zakoff enjoined. "You can help me, you can save our two lives and win our eternal gratitude," she explained, "if you will drive with me to the flying ground, or give me a permit which no one dare dispute, to depart with the American as soon as we are loaded up with petrol and oil, and order your guard to arrest Patinsky and Esterhazy, if they attempt to force their way into the plane."

Serge Zakoff reflected for several moments. "You are asking a great deal," he observed. "These men may make a grave business of it."

"They may," she admitted, "but, on the other hand, the father of the young American is one of the best-known men in his country and of immense wealth. The murder of his son over here would be a disaster. I can assure you, also, that unless we get away from these two men, Esterhazy and Patinsky, I myself shall be in terrible trouble. Whatever may happen in the future, Serge Zakoff, you are to my aid."

"What is the name upon your passport?" he asked.

"Anna Kastellane."

"And the American's?"

"Wilfred Haven. He is carrying a satchel sealed with the stamp of the United States Embassy."

Zakoff drew his chair up and wrote upon it swiftly. He signed his name and, unlocking the drawer, produced a great seal with which he stamped it.

"This will take you out of Odessa," he announced, "and will secure the obedience of every one on the flying ground."

She slipped the paper down the bosom of her dress and, leaning over, kissed him lightly on both cheeks. "There were tears in her eyes."

"Serge Zakoff," she said, "you have made me your debtor for all my life."

Young Chips Is Accused Of Kidnapping

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"That Wood Pewee has a sweet voice," said Mrs. Woody Woodpecker to her mate. "It's such a pleasant sound to listen to, too."

"Boys, you don't have to quarrel over that particular tree trunk," Woody remonstrated to his two young sons, who were both determined to have the same spot to hunt for insects and insect eggs. "There are plenty of trees around here. And in any case, one of you could go higher up on the trunk, if you must have the same tree."

"It certainly worries me, the way those children don't show the spirit of unselfishness," said Mrs. Woody. "I'm sure I've tried to teach them."

"Well, for goodness sake, look who's here," exclaimed Woody just then. "It's Young Chips. I haven't seen you for a long time. How is the family?"

"Oh, splendid, splendid," answered Young Chips. "Do you know, they're honestly the cleverest children I ever saw."

"Ha, ha, you haven't seen ours, yet, or you wouldn't try to get away with a statement like that," laughed Woody. "There are two of them over there on that tree trunk. Pretty good looking, eh? Can you fly yet?"

"Yes, they have just learned and they are doing wonderfully well," boasted Young Chips proudly. "The distance they can go is really quite amazing."

"Oh, thank goodness, I've found you at last," puffed a breathless voice by Young Chips' side, and Merry Chickadee alighted quickly beside him. "The most ghastly thing has happened. I thought I'd never find you. Why in the world didn't you tell me where you were going?"

"Good grief, Merry, tell me what's the matter quickly," demanded Young Chips. "Has one of the children been caught by a cat? Your face certainly looks as if that was it."

"I'm afraid something like that will happen, if it hasn't already," wailed Merry. "One of the boys is lost. I've looked everywhere for him. I'm nearly crazy with worry."

"When did you last see him?" inquired Woody sensibly.

"They were playing together right near me," explained Merry, "and the boys were trying to prove to the girls that they could fly better and farther than they could. Jimmy seemed to be the best flyer of the bunch, and then the first thing I knew he was nowhere in sight."

"The boy must take after me," said Young Chips. "I got lost once when I was a youngster and had the family nearly distracted before they found me again."

"Well, that's no comfort to me now," said Merry. "I'm sure something has happened to him. We are always hearing about some child that disappears and is never heard of again. Can't you do something helpful?"

"Come on then, let's go and hunt for him. Don't worry, my dear," he consoled Merry. "I think he'll be all right."

They flew hurriedly away, after imploring the Woodpeckers to search around their home for the wandering boy.

"I see him," Young Chips gasped at last, after they had been searching for a long time. "He's right over there in that cedar tree. For goodness sake, Jimmy," he called, "what in the world are you doing so far from home? Your mother has been worried sick. Hurry up and let's get home."

He went over and nudged the young Chickadee off the branch he was on, so that he was forced to fly. Instead of keeping going, however, he alighted on another tree and began to cheep plaintively.

In a moment an adult Chickadee came rushing out of a nearby tree, shouting indignantly.

"The very idea," she spluttered. "—you-you-kidnappers. Don't you dare touch my child! I thought he was safe just two or three yards away from me, but apparently there are thieves everywhere. Get away! Get away . . . go on!"

Young Chips and Merry didn't wait for a second invitation to get on their way.

"I could have sworn that that was Jimmy," said Young Chips. "I'm glad she didn't call all her friends out to peck at us."

"I certainly thought it was he, too," said Merry. "I was terribly embarrassed. Imagine trying to take away someone else's child. How awful!"

"And we still haven't found Jimmy," said Young Chips. "We're both very tired now and I think that the best idea would

PERFORM MIRACLES

There would be more banks than grocery stores all over Canada if banks could perform the miracle of "creating" the means of payment out of nothing.

It is easy to confuse these two things:

- (a) The business of commercial banking, and
- (b) Control of a nation's monetary system.

Commercial banking has to do with the safe-keeping and lending of money and credit.

Control of a monetary system is a matter of national, governmental policy.

Chartered banks finance production and commerce.

Monetary policy in any country is a matter for the national government itself, either directly, or through a central bank.

The Dominion Parliament established Canada's central bank in 1934—the Bank of Canada. Its purpose was declared by Parliament in the very first paragraph of the Act of Incorporation, as follows:

"To regulate credit and currency in the best interests of the economic life of the nation, to control and protect the external value of the national monetary unit and to mitigate by its influence fluctuations in the general level of production, trade, prices and employment so far as may be possible within the scope of monetary action, and generally to promote the economic and financial welfare of the Dominion."

It is for governments alone to determine a nation's monetary policy. Differing conditions of debt and trade may make what is wise for one country unwise for another.

Printing "tickets"—as currency has been called in some sections—entirely out of step with production would make everything you buy cost you more. A Canadian woman living in Germany during that country's inflation in 1923 had to pay 65,000,000 marks for an overcoat, and later 1,000,000,000 marks for a postage stamp!

The business of commercial banking is something to be considered by itself, apart from central banking.

A commercial bank takes deposits. There are two kinds of them. For convenience, call them "savings" and "current".

Say you are a workman, or a farmer. After you've paid your living costs out of your wage, or out of the proceeds of your crop, you have some dollars left over. Because you do not want to spend them at once you deposit them in a savings account.

That is a savings deposit. As distinguished from this is the "current" account. Say you are a merchant. You have expenses to meet day by day and therefore always carry a balance in an account against which you issue cheques for your business needs.

That is a current account. Let us say you have $100 in that account and you need $1,000 to meet some bills. You borrow it from the bank.

You give the manager your note and he places $1,000 to your credit as a deposit in your current account. Immediately your balance goes up to $1,100—$1,000 of it being derived directly from a loan.

It is unlike a savings deposit in this respect: You intend to spend it at once. You immediately issue cheques against it. You borrowed the money for business purposes, prepared to pay interest because the transaction was a profitable one to you. Soon most of the thousand has been paid out.

For most of the rest of the term of the loan your deposit is at its lowest. Then, before your note is due, you gather money to repay. Up goes your deposit to its peak again.

Then you repay. Your deposit abruptly drops back to say your original $100—plus the profit you have made, by the use of the borrowed money.

No matter whether bank deposits are savings or current, your bank must keep on hand cash reserves adequate to meet any demands from day to day.

When its loans are increased, not only is more cash paid out—as was the case with your $1,000 loan; but your bank's cash reserves also become lower in proportion to total deposits.

A bank must not unduly expand its lending operations, for then its cash will fall below the proportion which experience has shown to be necessary to meet the day-to-day demands of depositors. This very fact serves as an automatic check against excessive lending.

Your bank cannot know just when you will walk in to withdraw your deposit—but it must be ready to pay you, in full, in cash, when you do turn up.

THE CHARTERED BANKS OF CANADA

Your local branch bank manager will be glad to talk banking with you. He will be glad to answer your questions from the standpoint of his own experience. The next article in this series will appear in this newspaper. Watch for it.

SAYS WOODEN

FATHER, SON

"It is a fact that in many parts of the town the housewife finds the electric stove cooks slowly. It takes twice as long to boil a kettle and do the cooking as it would if the current entering the house were maintained at the proper voltage.

"Whether we like it or not, some changes should be made or conditions will gradually become worse. Mr. Rachar, our engineer, seems very competent and has already made some minor changes which will stop some of the loss of current.

"1. I am not in favor of borrowing money ($25,000 as suggested) to improve the service while at the same time we are selling power below cost.

"2. I am not in favor of making any extensive improvements on the service without doing the same under Hydro supervision. If necessary changes are made according to Hydro standards these improvements will not have to be scrapped when the Hydro takes the system over in 1945.

"3. Houses served by the three-wire system, where the consumer has an electric stove, water heater and other electric contrivances, pay as follows: for first 25 K.W., 3 cents per K.W.H.; for next 50 K.W., 1½ cents per K.W.H.; all over 75 K.W.H. at rate of 1 cent per K.W.H.

"If this last rate of one-half cent, which supplies current to the consumer below cost and maintenance, were raised to three-quarter cents per K.W.H., the annual revenue would be raised about $9,000. This would permit the electric light committee to gradually make the necessary improvements on the line. In this way the need of borrowing money on debentures and increasing the debt of the town would be avoided."
